

POSTMODERN CONSCIOUSNESS AND SOCIAL REALITY IN CONTEMPORARY HINDI POETRY

¹Anamika Tiwari, ²Dr. Manoj Kumar Singh

¹Research Scholar, Maharishi University of Information Technology, Lucknow, Assistant Professor, Karamat Husain Muslim Girls' P.G. College, Lucknow

²Assistant Professor, Maharishi University of Information Technology

ABSTRACT

This research study focuses on the theme of "Postmodern Consciousness and Social Reality in Contemporary Hindi Poetry." Postmodernism is a significant intellectual trend that emerged in the latter half of the twentieth century; it challenged established paradigms of modernity, universal truths, and linear perspectives, while prioritizing plurality, identity, fragmentation, and diversity. Forces such as globalization, liberalization, marketization, consumerism, and the advancement of information technology have profoundly influenced social structures and human values—impacts that are clearly reflected in contemporary Hindi poetry. The objective of this study is to examine the postmodern trends present in contemporary Hindi poetry and to analyze the influence of postmodernism on the genre. The study employs a qualitative and analytical research methodology, involving an examination of the poems, collections, and relevant critical literature of selected poets. Textual and content analysis methods have been used to analyze the material. The study reveals that themes such as globalization, marketization, displacement, a sense of alienation, political incongruities, women's identity, Dalit consciousness, social justice, and the crisis of human values have emerged prominently in contemporary Hindi poetry. While realistically portraying the social, economic, political, and cultural challenges of their times, contemporary poets have also given voice to a consciousness of resistance, awareness, and change. In conclusion, contemporary Hindi poetry serves as a powerful document of the interrelationship between postmodern consciousness and social reality, playing a significant role in understanding the complexities of present-day society.

KEYWORDS:- Postmodernism, Contemporary Hindi Poetry, Social Reality, Globalization, Marketization, Women's Discourse, Dalit Consciousness, Human Values.

How to cite this article: Tiwari A, Singh MK. Postmodern Consciousness and Social Reality in Contemporary Hindi Poetry. Int J Drug Deliv Technol. 2026;16(70s): 1250-1255. DOI: 10.25258/ijddt.16.70s.131

INTRODUCTION

Literature is considered a mirror of society. It not only offers an artistic presentation of human experiences, sensibilities, and thoughts but also paints a vivid picture of the social, cultural, political, and economic conditions of its time. Every era possesses a distinct consciousness that finds expression in literature in various forms. The new ideological and cultural trend that emerged globally following the modern era came to be known as postmodernism. By challenging traditional paradigms of life, society, culture, politics, and literature, postmodernism gave rise to new discourses and perspectives. Postmodernism is an ideological concept that developed in the latter half of the twentieth century, questioning the notions of universal truth, reason, progress, and uniformity established by modernity. It places importance on plurality, diversity, locality, identity, fragmentation, and alternative viewpoints. Globalization, liberalization, privatization, consumerism, the expansion of media, and the rapid development of information technology have profoundly influenced the structure of postmodern society. The impact of these changes is clearly visible in literature as well.

Hindi literature—particularly contemporary Hindi poetry—has become a powerful medium for expressing the complexities and contradictions of the postmodern era. Contemporary poets have prominently featured themes such as the changing social milieu, the crisis of human values, political anomalies, cultural fragmentation, economic inequality, the consumerist mindset, and the effects of globalization in their work. Thus, contemporary Hindi poetry has evolved beyond a mere medium for emotional expression into a sensitive interpretation of social reality. A significant aspect of postmodern consciousness is that it brings to the forefront those sections of society that had long been marginalized in literature and history. The issues and struggles of Dalits, women, Adivasis, laborers, and other deprived communities have become central themes in contemporary Hindi poetry. Discourses centered on identity have given powerful expression to the consciousness of social justice, equality, and human rights. Consequently, new dimensions of social reality have been unveiled in Hindi poetry. The influence of postmodern consciousness on contemporary Hindi poetry is not limited merely to subject matter; it is also evident in craft, language, symbols, imagery, and techniques of expression. Moving away from traditional poetic forms, poets have embraced novel structures and experimental styles. There has been an increased incorporation of deconstruction, polysemy, satire, intertextuality, and elements drawn from folk culture and the lives of the common people into poetry. This has rendered poetry more democratic and deeply connected to life.

In the present era, globalization and technological advancement have profoundly impacted human life. While the communication revolution and the expansion of economic opportunities have occurred on one hand, issues such as the crisis of cultural identity, social fragmentation, loneliness, displacement, and a loss of values have emerged on the other. Contemporary Hindi poetry critically analyzes these circumstances and gives voice to the evolving human worldview. Therefore, studying the interplay between postmodern consciousness and social reality is essential for understanding the current literary landscape. This study will analyze the postmodern consciousness expressed in contemporary Hindi poetry and the social reality depicted through it. It will also attempt to elucidate how contemporary poets have articulated the changing social, economic, political, and cultural contexts within their works. This study will prove instrumental in understanding the new dimensions, social concerns, and postmodern worldview inherent in Hindi poetry.

LITERATURE REVIEW

Vishwanath Prasad Tiwari (2024), in Samkaleen Hindi Kavita: Naye Aayam (Contemporary Hindi Poetry: New Dimensions), analyzes the emerging trends and new forms of expression in contemporary poetry. He clarifies that modern poetry places human existence, cultural crises, and questions of identity at its core, alongside social concerns.

Gopal Rai (2022), discussing the social perspective of Hindi literature and describing literature as a mirror of society, states that every literary work is influenced by the circumstances of its time. According to him, literature gives expression to the inequalities, conflicts, and human sensibilities prevalent in society.

Ramchandra Tiwari (2021), while studying the developmental journey of contemporary Hindi poetry, notes that themes such as globalization, marketism, technological advancement, and social disintegration have prominently emerged in current poetry. In his view, contemporary poetry serves as a powerful document of the historical and social conditions of its era.

Nandkishore Kumar (2020) has studied the philosophical foundations and literary impacts of postmodernism within Hindi literature. He explains that postmodernism is an ideological reaction against the limitations of modernity, prioritizing plurality, diversity, locality, and identity.

Manager Pandey (2018), in his book Sahitya ke Samajshastra ki Bhumika (Introduction to the Sociology of Literature), provides an in-depth analysis of the relationship between literature and society. According to him, literature is not merely an object of aesthetic appreciation but also a reflection of society's economic, political, and cultural structures. He posits that literature expresses the social consciousness of its time and plays an active role in social change. This perspective is crucial for the present study, as it forms the basis for understanding the expression of social reality in contemporary Hindi poetry.

Vishwanath Prasad Tiwari (2019) analyzes the major trends of post-independence Hindi poetry within the context of contemporary Hindi poetry. He highlights that the focal point of contemporary poetry is the common person—their struggles, their suffering, and social reality. The contemporary poet engages directly with the real-life problems of existence and exposes the contradictions of their times.

OBJECTIVES

1. To study postmodern trends in contemporary Hindi poetry.
2. To analyze the impact of postmodernism on contemporary Hindi poetry.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

The present study is based on qualitative and analytical research methodologies. It examines the postmodern consciousness and social reality expressed in contemporary Hindi poetry. Poetry collections of selected poets will serve as primary sources, while books, research papers, theses, and periodicals will be used as secondary sources. Data collection will be conducted through library-based and documentary research. Conclusions will be drawn by analyzing the gathered facts using textual and content analysis.

Postmodern Consciousness and Social Reality in Contemporary Hindi Poetry: A Detailed Analysis

1. Postmodernism and Contemporary Hindi Poetry

In the final decades of the twentieth century, global social, economic, cultural, and political changes profoundly impacted human life. Scientific advancements, information technology, globalization, liberalization, and the communication revolution transformed traditional structures of living. These changes led to questions regarding the ideals of modernity and fostered the emergence of a postmodern consciousness.

Postmodernism is not merely a single ideology or theory; rather, it represents a questioning perspective towards established beliefs, traditions, and so-called universal truths. Hindi poetry assimilated this new consciousness, undergoing significant transformations in both its thematic content and artistic form. The contemporary poet is no longer confined to aesthetics or sentimentality; instead, they emerge as a witness to the ironies, struggles, and incongruities of their times.

The fragmented psyche of the postmodern individual is clearly evident in the poetry of Shrikant Verma—

"I live in an invisible world

And can confidently feel my own self;

I am, at once, both a corpse and an otter."

Here, the crisis of individual identity, the fragmentation of the self, and existential restlessness stand out as key characteristics of postmodern consciousness.

2. The Impact of Globalization and Marketization

Globalization is the most significant phenomenon of the postmodern era. Following economic liberalization, the role of the market expanded vastly within Indian society. Multinational corporations, advertising culture, a consumerist mindset, and brand consciousness began to influence every sphere of life.

Contemporary Hindi poets observed that the market does not merely trade in commodities; it also governs human desires, emotions, and dreams. Today, an individual's identity is defined not by their character, but by their consumption habits.

Chandresh Gupta writes—

"Full on the outside, yet hollow within—

Such is the condition of living, such the compulsion."

Here, the tragedy of modern man is depicted. Despite external affluence, his inner world remains empty. The market transformed him into a consumer but failed to make him a satisfied human being.

Contemporary poetry repeatedly raises the question: does development and prosperity equate solely to consumption? Poets call for the restoration of human values in the face of rampant marketism.

3. Displacement and the Irony of Development

In postmodern society, massive industries, dams, highways, metro projects, and smart cities were constructed in the name of development. While these schemes accelerated economic progress, they simultaneously deprived millions of people of their land and livelihoods.

The issue of displacement emerges as a crucial theme in contemporary Hindi poetry. Poets have given voice to the suffering of those compelled to pay the price for development.

Consider these lines by a poet—

"I wear shoes made in my own country,

Yet I imagine I am walking upon my own soil;

They can take me anywhere—

Except to the place

From which we were evicted."

This poem narrates a story not merely of physical displacement, but also of cultural and psychological dislocation. Severed from their roots, individuals become plagued by insecurity and an identity crisis.

4. The problem of a sense of alienation and loneliness

While the expansion of communication media in the postmodern era has undoubtedly brought the world closer, the emotional distance between human beings has also widened. An individual may appear socially connected yet remain mentally isolated.

The lines by Agnishekhar illustrate this situation—

"Our eyes shy away from looking directly at one another.

We do not wish to truly know each other."

This depicts the mistrust, insecurity, and self-centered tendencies that have emerged within the individual. Modern technology has increased communication but diminished the intimacy of relationships.

In contemporary poetry, this loneliness manifests not merely as a personal experience but as the collective tragedy of society as a whole.

5. Political Ironies and Critique of Power

Contemporary Hindi poetry adopts a critical stance toward power and politics. Postmodern consciousness rejects any form of authoritarian power.

Poets have made issues such as rising corruption, opportunism, nepotism, and the neglect of the masses in a democracy the subjects of their work.

Dhumil writes—

"Come here,

come to me,

touch me, walk with me,

trust me,

step out of this quagmire."

Dhumil's poetry expresses deep dissatisfaction with the political system. He urges the public to abandon passivity and strive for change.

6. Female Identity and Feminist Discourse

Postmodernism has placed women at the center of literature. In contemporary Hindi poetry, the woman is no longer merely a symbol of pathos or beauty; instead, she emerges as a figure defined by struggle, self-reliance, and an awareness of her rights. Key themes in women's poetry include domestic violence, gender inequality, social restrictions, workplace challenges, and the aspiration for an independent existence. Contemporary female poets demand self-respect and an independent identity for women; this consciousness forms a crucial part of postmodern discourse.

7. Dalit Consciousness and Social Justice

Post-modernism endowed Dalit literature with new ideological strength. Contemporary Hindi poetry offers a realistic portrayal of Dalit experiences, exploitation, discrimination, and social injustice.

Dalit poets have challenged the caste system that has persisted for centuries. They demand equality, dignity, and human rights. Their poetry becomes a document of social change.

8. The Crisis of Human Values

In post-modern society, the race for material achievements has eroded morality and sensitivity. Relationships are becoming utilitarian, and the individual is increasingly confined within the boundaries of self-interest.

The poet writes—

"Full of themes,

Yet devoid of facts."

This line accurately depicts the artificial glitter and the underlying emptiness of modern life.

Recognizing this crisis of values, contemporary poetry advocates for the restoration of human sensibilities.

9. Consciousness of Resistance, Struggle, and Change

Contemporary Hindi poetry does not merely depict crises; it also registers resistance against them. The poet inspires a struggle against injustice, exploitation, and inequality.

Consider these famous lines by Dhumil—

"Choose whomever you wish,

But not this;

Change this."

These lines embody the aspiration for change and the voice of social revolution. This constitutes the greatest strength of contemporary poetry.

Contemporary Hindi poetry serves as a comprehensive record of the social, cultural, economic, and political realities of the post-modern era. It offers a profound portrayal of globalization, marketization, displacement, loneliness, female identity, Dalit consciousness, political ironies, and the crisis of human values. Poets have not only articulated the problems of their times but have also fostered a consciousness of resistance and change aimed at finding solutions. Thus, contemporary Hindi poetry highlights the deep connection between post-modern consciousness and social reality, serving as a vital medium for understanding present-day society.

CONCLUSION

The present study makes it evident that contemporary Hindi poetry presents a powerful and realistic portrayal of the social, cultural, economic, and political conditions of the postmodern era. Postmodern consciousness has endowed Hindi poetry with new themes, sensibilities, and modes of expression. Issues such as globalization, marketization, consumerism, displacement, a sense of alienation, political ironies, women's identity, Dalit consciousness, and the crisis of human values have emerged at the core of contemporary poetry. Poets have not merely articulated the incongruities, contradictions, and challenges of their times but have also fostered a consciousness of resistance, awareness, and change regarding them. Thus, contemporary Hindi poetry serves not only as a mirror to societal realities but also proves to be a potent medium for upholding human sensibilities, social justice, and democratic values, while deeply illuminating the interconnections between postmodern consciousness and social reality.

REFERENCES

1. Awasthi, Omprakash. (1974). After the New Poetry. Allahabad: Pustak Sansthan, p. 65.
2. Kumar, Krishna (ed.) (1987). In Search of Another Democracy: Dhumil. New Delhi: Sahitya Nidhi, p. 103.
3. Kumar, Krishna (ed.) (1987). In Search of Another Democracy: Dhumil. New Delhi: Sahitya Nidhi, p. 57.
4. Kumar, Nandkishore. (2020). Postmodernism and Hindi Literature. New Delhi: Lokbharati Publications.
5. Chaturvedi, Jagdishwar. (2020). Postmodernism. New Delhi: Anamika Publishers.
6. Tiwari, Ramchandra. (2021). Contemporary Scenario of Hindi Poetry. Varanasi: University Publications.
7. Tiwari, Vishwanath Prasad. (2019). Contemporary Hindi Poetry. New Delhi: Rajkamal Publications.
8. Tiwari, Vishwanath Prasad (2024). Contemporary Hindi Poetry: New Dimensions. New Delhi: Rajkamal Prakashan.
9. Doosre Pratikshatra (Publication details not available), p. 53.
10. Dwivedi, Vivek (2022). Globalization and Hindi Literature. New Delhi: Gyan Ganga Prakashan.
11. Pandey, Purushottam Agarwal (2021). Culture, Dominance and Resistance. New Delhi: Rajkamal Prakashan.
12. Pandey, Manager (2018). The Role of Sociology in Literature. New Delhi: Vani Prakashan.
13. Pandey, Manager (2023). Literature, Society and Culture. New Delhi: Rajkamal Prakashan.
14. Bharadwaj, Shailaja (ed.) (2011). Contemporary Understanding in Hindi Literature. Kanpur: Chintan Prakashan, p. 26.
15. Bharadwaj, Shailaja (ed.) (2011). Contemporary Consciousness in Hindi Literature. Kanpur: Chintan Prakashan, p. 28.
16. Bhardwaj, Shailaja (ed.) (2011). Contemporary Consciousness in Hindi Literature. Kanpur: Chintan Prakashan, p. 88.
17. Mandloi, Leeladhar (ed.) (2001). A Hundred Years of Poetry. New Delhi: Shilpayan Prakashan, p. 366.
18. Mandloi, Leeladhar (ed.) (2001). A Hundred Years of Poetry. New Delhi: Shilpayan Prakashan, p. 366.
19. Mishra, Vidyanivas (2023). Indianness and Postmodern Discourse. New Delhi: Prabhat Prakashan.
20. Mishra, Shivkumar (2020). Contemporary Poetry and Social Concerns. New Delhi: Vani Prakashan.
21. Mishra, Arun Kumar (2022). Postmodern Sensibility in Hindi Poetry. New Delhi: Radhakrishna Prakashan.
22. Yadav, Rajendra (2024). Postmodern Consciousness in Hindi Literature. New Delhi: Vani Prakashan.
23. Rai, Gopal (2022). Social Perspective of Hindi Literature. New Delhi: Rajkamal Prakashan.
24. Verma, Narendra Mohan (2023). Postmodernism: Theory and Context. New Delhi: Vani Prakashan.
25. Sharma, Gopeshwar Singh (2021). Contemporary Literature: Discourse and Reality. New Delhi: Vani Prakashan.
26. Sharma, Ramesh Chandra (1994). Jaane Kya Baat Kahe. Introduction, Hindi

- Literature. New Delhi: Sambandh Publishers.
27. Shukla, Ashok (2023). Contemporary Hindi Poetry and Social Reality. Kanpur: Sahitya Ratnalaya.
 28. Singh, Namvar (2019). New Paradigms of Poetry. New Delhi: Rajkamal Prakashan.
 29. Singh, Bachchan (2021). History of Modern Hindi Literature. New Delhi: Lokbharati Publications.
 30. Singh, Sudhish Pachauri. (2022). Postmodern Literary Discourse. New Delhi: Vani Publications.